

Word Retrieval Worksheets

Introduction:

Some children have trouble coming up with the correct word when they need it. They may pause, stumble, or add filler words like “um” and “uh”. This often indicates that the language centers of the child’s brain are disorganized for some reason. Doing word-association activities, such as the ones on the following pages, can help the child organize the language in his brain better so that he has an easier time accessing those words when he needs them.

Instructions:

Pick any of the worksheets on the following pages. There is no particular order to do these in so you can choose any worksheet to start. Do the activities on the sheet with the child and help him as necessary.

When these types of activities are done consistently, word retrieval skills should improve over time.

Extra Practice:

Help your child practice these types of fill-in-the blanks at other times as well. You can say some of these while waiting in a line or driving in the car. The more you do this, the faster his word retrieval will become!

Improving Word Retrieval Skills

Rapid Naming from Categories

Have your child name as many things from each of these categories as she can. Make sure she does it as quickly as she can as well. Time her to see how fast she can come up with 10 items. When you've used all of these categories, try asking about other categories as well.

Vehicles

Foods

Clothes

Drinks

Toys

Actions

Body Parts

Furniture

Extra Practice:

Continue to ask your child to do this throughout the week. You can try this activity while waiting somewhere or on a long car ride. Make it a family game and have everyone try. Have your child choose a category for you to name 10 items from as well.

Activities for Improving Word Retrieval:

Provide a Word from a Definition

Write a word in each blank that fits the definition provided. The word must make sense with the definition. If your child cannot read or write, say these out loud and have your child say a word that could fill in the blank. Time how long it takes your child to do 10 of these. Then, see if your child can beat his record next time.
